Headless Horseman creeps onto Coastal stage

REPORTER

The Coastal Carolina theater department is playing The Legend of Sleepy Hollow.

The play is brightly hysterical while being undeniably creepy and dark. The play is based on the original tale of The Legend of Sleepy Hollow by Washington Irving. It follows the story of Ichabod Crane as he is chased through the woods one dark night by the Headless Horseman.

Coastal student Michael Onofaro plays Ichabod Crane.

With his gangly build and sharp features, he is a captivating character throughout his whole performance. He is very much a live action cartoon with a delightfully whimsical take on the lofty school teacher. He uses over the top movements and speech patterns.

Onofaro said the play is very different.

"It was written as a children's play, so it has a very light and comedic tone to it," said Onofaro. "Whereas in the short story it's a bit darker and there's some added characters and some added plot points to it. It's also a different medium, so you kind of have to tell the story in a different way. The main plot points are there, but it takes a totally different tone."

The play is comical, eccentric, inevitably funny, and nicely executed.

Sarah Davidson's set, though minimal, is thoroughly used and crafted in an enchantingly eerie conception.

Sami Papp's costumes are purposeful and help to shape the character's individuality especially with those eclectic face masks.

Onofaro said they are doing something completely different from any other show by adding masks to the performance.

"Every character has a mask for the entire show, which is very different from acting without a mask because you have to be more in your body," said Onofaro. "I feel like because your physical life is so much more important because that's all people really see because they won't see your facial expressions."

Reggie Shaw spreads awareness by reliving the nightmare

Jake Weiss
REPORTER

The Big Read; A Deadly Wandering, was a presentation based on the dangers of texting and driving.

It was presented by a man who spreads awareness on texting and driving. This man is also responsible for the deaths of two men.

Reggie Shaw, a 28 year old man who has faced the consequences of texting and driving, took a visit to Coastal Carolina on October 13, 2015. Shaw's story of his car crash came with unexpected baggage. He would never have thought he would have to present his story in front of thousands of people every year.

A book was written about Shaw's car crash that killed two men. A Deadly Wandering, was written solely about him and the dangers of texting and driving. The book brought Shaw across America. He even met Oprah, but this man does not want to be considered a celebrity.

Shaw is a devout Mormon from Utah, who recently became a husband as of last May. He carries an agreeable disposition, but because of his previous actions, he is in a dire situation.

Shaw said he wants to express his full out honesty.

Uncovering Chauncey's birthday

Samantha Bergold
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

A new tradition has been created at Coastal Carolina. Chauncey's birthday will now be a celebration on campus.

Associate Director of Scheduling and Space Management Lauren Koonce and Functional Administrator of Scheduling and Event Services Daniel Hucks helped uncover Chauncey's birth date.

Koonce said they were trying to figure out an event to test out on the new scheduling site 25Live.

"We didn't want it be something necessarily that we think was a real event in this office," said Koonce. "We were like lets do something with Chauncey and Daniel Hucks was like lets do his birthday."

Hucks said it was this fun thing that everybody could relate to.

"Then it was, what's the real date of Chauncey's birthday?" said Hucks. "We kind of went from there."

Director of Scheduling and Event Services Porter Medley III then recommended that they try to discover Chauncey's real birth date.

Hucks then called around with everyone he could think of to find out the date. The first instance of The Chanticleer being documented on Coastal Carolina's campus was in The Chanticleer newspaper.

The first issue of The Chanticleer newspaper was on October 23, 1963. The name of the newspaper was changed from The Fledgling to The Chanticleer on that day.

Medley said in Roy Talbert's book of Coastal Carolina University history there was a page showing the newspaper changing the name.

"Before that, people have used it in passing, but it wasn't 100% Coastal owned," said Hucks.

Hucks said it was the first printed issue with reference to the name Chanticleer.

"We couldn't really find any

reference to if it was used before that or not," said Hucks. "A year and a half later, the basketball team adopted the name for their mascot."

Medley said Coach Maddox announced to the university "that for here on forward are team will be know as The Chanticleers."

EDITOR'S NOTE

How to ace the interview

Samantha Bergold
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

We are all scared for the future. After four years at Coastal you will graduate and be put out into the real world. Everyone wants a job. You may be competing with the best of the best for your dream job. You want to stand out among your competition, but you do not know how. Here are ways how you can get the dream job by aching the interview.

Prepare for the interview

Look up background information on the company. Look into the vision and mission statement of the company. If their vision and mission statement do not align with your goals, then the company is not for you.

First impressions are everything. Make sure to dress professionally in wrinkle free business casual clothing. Bring copies of your resume with references, information needed to complete the job application (ID, Social Security, etc.), portfolio of work, and a pen with a notepad.

Prepare for their questions with responses. Look up the common interview questions and practice them. For example, one of the biggest questions asked is what is your biggest strength and weakness. Instead of saying I do not have any weaknesses, make your weakness sound like a positive.

Ace the interview

You have to think like a hiring manager at the interview. Hiring managers do not just look for qualifications, but also a connection to who they are interviewing. You are a product. Do not just sell what you can do, but who you are. Look around their office for a commonality, there is sure to be something you have in common with them.

A hiring manager may try to scare you, appearing monotone, stand offish, and no emotions on their face. They are seeing how you react under pressure. It is all about how you react. Breathe, sit up straight, and have your feet on the floor. If you are sitting confident, you will feel and be confident.

End the interview

You may think the hardest part of the interview is over, but is not. The most important part of the interview is just starting. They will ask you if you have any questions for them. This is very important. If you do not ask any questions it will make you seem like you do not care and do not have passion for the job. Make sure to close out the interview with a strong handshake. Do not be afraid to reach out after saying thank you for the interview.

If you follow these tips and tricks, you will surely ace your next interview and get the job. Make sure to prepare, go in with confidence, and reach out to them after the interview. Next time you go into an interview, go in with confidence/preparation and you will come out with a job.

Raising breast cancer awareness

Kaley Lawrimore
REPORTER

October is known as breast cancer awareness month and the majority of businesses and sports teams, including Coastal Carolina University's football team, are decked out in pink gear.

Most college students do not think they could ever be diagnosed with breast cancer at a young age. According to an Adolescent and Young Adult Oncology Progress review group, 70,000 people between the age of 15 and 39 are diagnosed with cancer every year. In those numbers, breast cancer is one of the most common cancers found in patients 25 to 39 years old.

Breast cancer can affect anyone. Savannah Lackey, a freshman at Coastal Carolina University, was in sixth grade when her grandmother passed away after fighting breast cancer for the third time.

Her grandmother's battle was hard on her and she regretted not spending more time with her. She spoke about how important it is to tell people you love exactly how much you care about them today.

"You really have to cherish the time you have with people because you never know when you're going to see them again or if they're going to be too sick to remember who you are," Lackey said.

However, as more years pass, the chance for survival after the initial diagnosis increases.

Coastal Carolina student Tessie Dutschke witnessed a close mentor battle breast cancer and beat it.

Dutschke was a senior in high school when her Girl Scout troop leader was diagnosed with breast cancer.

"You want to do as much as you can and you're not sure what you can do to help," said Dutschke.

Dutschke said that the battle made

70,000
people between the age of 15 and 39 are diagnosed with cancer every year

her want to go out and raise awareness for breast cancer.

Her Girl Scout troop leader endured the treatments and pain, going into remission after the tumor was removed. According to Dutschke, she is now living a normal life.

Catching breast cancer early is the key to a higher survival rate. According to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), self examination is one thing you can do right now, regardless of your age or family history.

Check for any new lumps in the breasts or underarms and feel for thickening or swelling in part of the breast.

The CDC says that some of these warning signs can happen with other conditions that are not cancer, but it is better to be safe and contact a doctor if you have any of these symptoms.

Lackey and Dutschke both agree that more could be done at Coastal Carolina University to inform students of the warning signs of breast cancer and to raise more awareness to finding a cure.

According to Jennifer Maddox, the Health Educator at Student Health Services, the facility offers pap smears and physical breast exams. If there are any abnormalities in the breast, the Student Health Services will refer students to a specialized center where a mammogram will be conducted.

Maddox said students who have their breasts examined, will receive shower hanger cards that show them how to do a self breast exam.

Students with any concerns should contact the Student Health Services at 843-349-6543 or visit the center located beside Public Safety.

my nature not wanting to talk, not wanting to share my feelings," said Shaw. "For metogo out and speak, it helps me keep going."

After his unfortunate car crash at 19, Shaw was sentenced to 30 days in jail and 300 hours of community service. That community service forced Reggieto travel around his home state of Utah and give speeches about why to stop texting and driving.

After 300 hours of community service was finished, Shaw had a choice to make. He could either resume his normal life or he could continue to spread awareness of texting and driving. He chose to keep speaking.

"If I don't speak I get real depressed," said Shaw. "Even now, nine years later, if I'm not helping others, it pulls me down. So speaking helps me avoid that depression and helps me stay up."

People question the audacity of Shaw's motivations for traveling across America to spread his word on the dangers of texting and driving. Some think he is wallowing in his despair and others think he is doing it for the money.

"I wish that I could go out and help people and teach people without having to take someone's life" said Shaw.

This is not what he wants to be known for. Shaw has been blessed with a lot of opportunities and is grateful for them.

Shaw did not choose this life to live. He would rather go get his degree in Communications than travel the country reliving this nightmare.

Instead of just being another case of texting and driving, Shaw wants to spread awareness on this topic.

"It's not worth it," said Shaw. "Any text message and phone call behind the wheel, I promise you it's not worth it, doesn't matter how important it is. One text message, one phone call, you can regret that for the rest of your life. You don't want to. I promise you, that stuff can wait."

Glow up the night with the Chauncey 5k

Jessica Wetzler
REPORTER

Coastal Carolina will be hosting the third annual Chauncey 5k race on October 30, 2015.

The Chauncey 5k is an opportunity for student organizations and clubs to come together in an effort to raise money for a desired charity.

The race starts at 7:30 p.m. and will be a glow in the dark night run allowing runners and volunteers to wear glow sticks.

The course begins and ends at Brooks Stadium and travels around the entire campus, allowing for some scenery during the run. The course in total is 3.1 miles long.

The athletic department is partnering with sororities on campus. The organizations participating in the race will receive 10% of the profits made.

Runners who signed up early enough will receive a dry fit t-shirt and other items that will glow to insure they can be seen at night.

Runners are encouraged to bring additional glow items or run in their favorite glow in the dark gear to stand out in the crowd.

Assistant Athletic Director for Ticket Operations and Revenue Michael Jacobs is one of the staff members in charge of running the event.

Jacobs said the race's course is styled differently this year.

Since the university approved to close off University Boulevard, the race will run along the boulevard and through the horseshoe. It will then finish at Brooks Stadium.

"It is fun to go out with students with the same goal," said Jacobs. "The excitement is the same feeling as watching our fellow teams play on the big screen."

Immediately following the 5k, runners can enjoy food and watch awards being handed out at Brooks Stadium. Keep in mind that the snacks are only available for runners.

The awards will be a Coastal Carolina styled runner hat. Michael Jacobs said having something the participants can use many times would be a better reward and incentive than a heavy piece of medal that is worn once.

For any individual who wants to sign up who is outside of the Coastal Community, the price is $30 until race day. For Coastal Faculty/Staff, the price to sign up is $25 until race day. For Coastal students, it is $15 to sign up until race day. All ages and skill levels are welcome to sign up and race.

Michael Jacobs said the race provides a nice outlet for students.

Race packet pickups will be available for pickup on Thursday, October 29, from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. and Friday, October 30, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the HTC center. Runners can pick up their packets at Brooks Stadium at 6 p.m. on the day of the race.

Students and faculty can sign up online through active.com. The link can be found on the Coastal Carolina webpage using the search word Chauncey 5k.

"We wanted to make it a tradition here at the university because we thought it was rather unique," said Medley.

"We don't know any other university that mascots celebrates their birthday."

Hucks said they then talked to Eddie Dyer in the alumni department.

Eddie Dyer was the executive vice president. He retired on June 30, 2015.

"He had been here probably

"We don't know any other university that mascots celebrates their birthday"

longer than any other person here at the university," said Medley.

"He worked directly with Dr. DeCenzo. We used him as a guide. His requirement was that the office of alumni relations and the Coastal athletic association buy into it first."

Medley said they got permission through writing them.

"They thought it was a great idea," said Medley. "Then it was brought up to student affairs. They really liked the idea. Then it went to the president and his comment was that Chauncey has a birthday."

Students taking active responsibility

Kara Thomas
ASSISTANT EDITOR

Students Taking Active Responsibility, also known as S.T.A.R., is a volunteer organization on campus with 451 members.

Within the organization, students can take winter and spring break trips to volunteer with Habitat for Humanity and Give Kids the World.

The organization volunteers at Waccamaw Animal Rescue Mission, D.S.S. babysitting, soup kitchens, and S.C. Cares. Members also participate in beach sweeps at local state parks.

S.T.A.R. was founded in the early 2000s.

Elaine Giles is the advisor for the organization.

"S.T.A.R. members have participated in a wide range of service events," said Giles. "From Habitat for Humanity builds, to assisting with community clean up days, river sweeps, beach sweeps, participating in the Waccamaw Heart Walk and Alzheimer's Walk, volunteering at local hospices and animal shelters just to name a few."

One of the more recent volunteer events they did was the Waccamaw Heart Walk on Saturday, October 17.

"S.T.A.R. members have participated in a wide range of service events"

"We had a group volunteer at the Waccamaw Heart Walk," said Giles. "The group helped set up signs and booths prior to the event, ran the booths and gave away raffle tickets, and helped with the clean up of the event. We also had a group participate in the 2015 Walk to End Alzheimer's on the same day providing event support as well."

On October 22 members helped out with the American Red Cross blood drive from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at Wall Circle. On October 27 the organization helped with the bone marrow drive in front of Hicks and CINO.

"If students are interested in service and desire to make impactful collaborative action, S.T.A.R. can help students connect to meaningful service experiences," said Giles. "S.T.A.R. also has great relationships with approximately 60 community partners across the area and is happy to connect students to agencies that align with a student's interest in different social issues."

"Giles has a passion for community service and enjoys being the advisor."

"My favorite part about advising S.T.A.R. is connecting with students who have a desire and a heart for service," said Giles.

In S.T.A.R., there is always something to volunteer for and members strive to make an impact on the community.

The best feature of this show was the incredible use of sound, which was designed by Preston Krenicki.

Almost all of the sound effects were live, made both on and off stage by the actors themselves during the entire show. Whether it was the ridiculous singing methods or the chill inducing whispers and shrieks, the use of sound was purely effective in all the right ways.

Onofaro encourages that it's a show to not pass up the chance of seeing.

"People should look forward to it, because it's a fun show," said Onofaro. "It's not Shakespeare, nothing too deep or difficult to comprehend so it's fun. I feel like the audience is going to have fun when they watch it. There's a lot of funny moments, but we also aren't afraid to go to those dark moments either. You get a little bit of both. You laugh, you cry, and there are some sad moments too. You get scared. You get thoroughly entertained."

The play will be performed from Oct. 29 - 31 in the Edwards Black Box Theater.

There is a simple message to take away from the show.

"Face your fears," said Onofaro. "Always face your fears, cause you'll never get anywhere if you run away from them."

Big South letdown: No more madness

Ian Brooking
and Jessica Wetzler
REPORTERS

For the past three years, one week in early March has brought some of the best memories to students and faculty of Coastal Carolina. Since 2013, Coastal Carolina University has hosted the Big South basketball tournament at the HTC Center.

The tournament brought so much more to campus than the back to back titles for the Chanticleers. The tournament games were broadcasted through ESPN3, with the championship game being shown on ESPN2.

Local businesses and restaurants in Conway and the Myrtle Beach area profited off the many traveling fans that came to support their college teams.

On September 1, 2015, Coastal Carolina announced that it will be joining the Sun Belt Conference for the 2016-2017 athletic season, except football, which will join in 2017. While the move to the Sun Belt conference will benefit our school in the future, it may have cost us something in the end.

Big South Conference Commissioner Kyle B. Kallinder announced on October 13 that the 2016 Big South basketball, baseball, and outdoor track and field championships will be moved from Coastal Carolina University.

The Big South Conference by laws specify that members leaving with less than two years of notice are not eligible to host championships.

Liberty University will now host the Big South outdoor track and field championships in 2016. The host of the 2016 Big South baseball tournament will be announced later in the fall.

Ever since Coastal Carolina made the announcement in September, the Big South has been working with the university and the Myrtle Beach Chamber in regards to the basketball championship contractual details.

All organizations and institutions involved agreed to have the proposed championships moved. In the interest of fairness to the student athletes at Coastal Carolina, the Big South has allowed Coastal Carolina to host championships with an earned seeds format. Those championships include men's soccer, women's soccer, and women's lacrosse.

The news came as a bit of a shock to student athletes across campus.

Spring Brooks Stadium has gone through some heavy renovations the past few years and was set to be ready to host the 2016 Big South baseball tournament in the spring.

The HTC center installed a new basketball floor twelve weeks ago in preparation for the new season.

Members of the basketball team were extremely shocked to hear the news that Coastal Carolina would not be hosting the Big South tournament in 2016.

"It was really something to look forward to," said junior guard Elijah Wilson, who was named the Big South basketball tournament MVP in 2015. "You're playing your conference tournament on your home floor. While it gave a sense of home court advantage, the fans were energized and enthusiastic at the games. It really helped us focus during clutch situations."

Many Coastal Carolina students are shocked by the Big South's announcement. Several avid Coastal basketball fans feel let down by the conference.

Member of ChantNation Josh Onorato said to be honest, he was really upset.

"It gave students like myself something to do over spring break," said Onorato. "The tickets were free for all students, which is something you won't find anywhere else. Most conferences will charge high prices for tickets to conference championship games. So for it to be free just made the overall experience even better."

The one change made to the tournament was the scheduling. The Big South men's and women's basketball tournament will now be split up into two separate events. The men's tournament will be held from Thursday, March 3 to Sunday, March 6. While the women's will be held a week later from March 10 to the 13.

There is no new set location for the 2016 Big South men's and women's basketball tournaments. Many think that UNC Asheville would be a good place to host the tournament.

"UNC Asheville's arena is the closest arena that is similar in size to ours," explains Elijah Wilson. "I think we'd be more comfortable on that court. Not to mention, it has a lot of hotels and accommodations which benefits the fans that travel to see their team play."

Winthrop has been hinted as a possible host for the tournament.

"Winthrop or someplace close to Charlotte," said Onorato. "While Charlotte may not have a Big South school, it would be pretty cool to visit and to watch the teams play in the Time Warner Cable Arena."

One thing many students will miss next spring is the rushing of the court after a big win in the Big South tournament.

Coastal Carolina will feel a little different come March when the madness of the Big South tournament is somewhere else.

of Monmouth, who played for the Hawks and set the record back in 2007.

Coastal Carolina had to rely on their fourth down defense to help seal Saturday's win. Monmouth was three for 12 on third downs and the Chanticleer defense held the Hawks to one for four on fourth down conversions.

"Defense came up big when we needed them," said Coach Moglia. "We gave up some big yards. We still have things we need to work on in practice, but hats off to our defense. They definitely gave us today's win."

Granger continued his excellent form after being named the FCS and Big South Special Teams Player of the Week, two weeks ago after his performance in the game against Presbyterian. Granger went three for three on field goals, one from 32 yards out and two from 30 yards out. It was the last field goal he made that counted the most.

With the win, Coastal Carolina improves to 7-0 in the season and 2-0 in Big South Conference.

The Chanticleers are back in action as they travel to Charleston Southern for a Halloween night showdown at 7 p.m. Coastal Carolina returns home the following week to play Gardner-Webb at 3:30 p.m. on November 7.

It was another nail biter on Saturday in New Jersey as Coastal Carolina won in the last seconds, 23-20 over Monmouth.

It was all smiles after the win in New Jersey on Saturday.

Kicker Ryan Granger was a huge help once more for the Chanticleers as he hit a 30-yard field goal as time expired, helping Coastal Carolina maintain their perfect record, now standing at 7-0.

The victory was even sweeter for junior running back, DeAngelo Henderson, who carried the ball 25 times for 91 yards and a touchdown. Henderson scored his sole touchdown midway through the second quarter from two yards out, taking the record for most consecutive games with a touchdown.

"A lot of people have been talking about it for the past few weeks," said Henderson. "It is true honor to hold that record. Give God the glory and I want to praise my offensive line. They're the ones who help me get to that end zone."

The previous record was 20 consecutive games by David Sinisi

West coast rapper, The Game, delivered his highly anticipated album, The Documentary 2 following his previous album, The Documentary.

The Game had a great line up of features on this album including Kanye West, Kendrick Lamar, Drake, and Snoop Dogg.

The second song on the album titled, 'On Me,' featured Kendrick Lamar backed with female vocals. The Game and Kendrick Lamar then deliver their first verses.

Towards the end of the song, one of the most crucial parts is when The Game 'spits' a verse in Acapella on top of a beat with an old school twist.

The 11th song on the album titled, 'Dedicated,' featured Future and Sonyae. It is a compelling track that discusses the idea of being secure in a relationship. The verses by The Game are very concrete. Sonyae shows her vocal skills off towards the end of the song, ending it on a great note.

The 14th song titled, 'Mula,' featured Kanye West and was another great track. It is a motivational song to listen to before a big meeting, speech, or game. The part where Kanye sings about feeling lonely and crazy is very catchy.

The Documentary 2 was a pretty solid album. He released The Documentary 2.5, which will provide even more tracks. The second part of 'Like Father Like Son' from The Documentary album can be found on this album.

Halloween is right around the corner and that means it is time to get prepared for the spooky day. Loading up on candy and picking out the scariest costume is great, but the tradition of watching a favorite freaky flick is what truly makes it feel like Halloween.

Everyone loves a film they can watch that will make them feel like a kid again. Hocus Pocus is one of the greatest Halloween films of all time that everyone needs to see. Luckily, it plays on ABC Family's 13 Nights of Halloween.

After moving to Salem, Massachusetts, a rebel teenager named Max Dennison explores an abandoned house with his sister Dani and their new friend Allison. Max is not into the whole Halloween idea and believes that the superstitions surrounding the town are just a bunch of hocus pocus.

After dismissing a story Allison tells him as irrational and made up, Max accidentally frees a coven of evil witches played by Bette Midler, Sarah Jessica Parker, and Kathy Najimy.

The witches used to live in the house the kids find themselves in. With the help of a magical cat, the trio must steal the witches' book of spells to stop them from becoming immortal and stealing the lives of all the children in Salem.

Hocus Pocus is a forever classic that combines all the components that make a great Halloween film. Quirky witches, extravagant costumes, well placed humor, and a talking cat are just a few things that make this film great.

Hocus Pocus is a crowd pleaser that will bring back memories from your childhood and is the definite go to film for Halloween.

Treats to binge on this Halloween season

1 Pillsbury's Halloween Sugar Cookies

Pillsbury offers their trademark sugar cookies for each holiday. For Halloween, they sell cookies decorated with pumpkins. They are perfect to serve at any Halloween party or to eat a whole batch by yourself because they are just that good. Go ahead, no one will judge you.

2 Pumpkin Spice Latte (PSL)

You know winter is coming when everyone is drinking a Pumpkin Spice Latte. Starbucks offers this delicious treat starting the beginning of September so you have plenty of time to get your PSL fix before the season ends in December.

3 Pumpkin Pie

In case you cannot get your pumpkin fix from the PSL, grab a slice of pumpkin pie. If it's homemade, it will have your whole place smelling amazing. For a bonus, you can carve out a funny face from the remaining pumpkin and set it outside to greet your trick or treaters.

4 Candied and Caramel Apples

They are sticky, sweet, and somewhat healthy. They are a favorite at pumpkin patches, Halloween hayrides, and fall festivals. Busy schedules means no time for these fall favorites, but do not worry! Amazon sells an Apple Dipper for $50 and it even comes with three trays to hold your favorite toppings.

5 Candy Corn

Who does not love candy corn? They are great by themselves or in a mix with other sweet Halloween treats. You can even use them as a decoration to add a little Halloween spice by displaying them in a dish on the coffee table.
